To Whom It May Concern

September Brod is one of the best contractors with whom I have worked. She is one of the few who I trust completely.

When I first started working with September in 2000 I was quickly impressed with her work ethic. She approaches her work not just as a job but as an extension of who she is. She instills integrity and honesty in all her products which, by the way, are of excellent quality. September is skilled in working with others, demonstrating a respect and acceptance of others in a truly refreshing manner.

The projects I worked with September involved researching information repositories, conducting site visits, initiating contact with previously unidentified community members, and conducting interviews. Much of her work has been in remote Alaska with Tribes unfamiliar with our particular federal bureaucracy. Her methods of educating and involving tribal and community members are excellent and further the project objectives.

What may be the best thing about working with September on a project is I do not concern myself with the end product. I have no worries about what will happen in the field or what product I will receive. I know I will get a product I can trust - without fail:
